

Leps A.,
Doctor of Law, Professor, member of Rome Club,
Legal Academy of Tallinn University ♦

Philosophy of Hegel and crime as a phenomenon of nature

Abstract: Modern criminology adds up crimes which committed in any territory for a certain period of time, resulting in receives a new phenomenon. The study of this phenomenon has efficient significance for the activities of specific institutions at a particular locality at a certain time, but it is far from a scientific study of crime. It is examined understanding of Hegel about thing in relation to crime.

Keywords: Hegel, philosophy, thing, crime, criminology, problem.

